

The Editor's Page

Pictured below are four people who are involved with the production of the Journal of Extension. Roland Abraham, far left, the director of Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Minnesota, has been president of the Board of Directors of the Journal of Extension since 1971.

He's pictured at the 1974 Board of Directors meeting receiving thanks and congratulations from (left to right): yours truly; assistant editor Colleen Schuh, University of Wisconsin; and new board president Randall Barnett, assistant director of Cooperative Extension Service, University of Kentucky. Roland received a plaque from the Board of Directors in appreciation for his efforts as president. Thanks, Roland, for a job well done.

Other important decisions were reached at this year's Journal of Extension board meeting. First, the Journal of Extension will look new and different beginning with our first issue next year. It will be 7 by 10 inches with a new, open, fresh, and inviting format published 6 times a year. Watch for this first issue in January, 1975. The Board of Directors also reviewed rising costs of the Journal and have decided to increase the rates. They hope the new annual rates ($8 for bulk, $9 for individual subscription) will cover the increases without reducing the quality or number of subscriptions.
